THE VERDICT.

The verdict in the Pollard-Breckenridge case is a genuine surprise to us, as we believe it will be to nine out of every ten men who have read it. We can have no complaint of the verdict as regards Breckenridge. It is vastly inadequate so far as his deservings go. It should have been one hundred, in stead of fifteen thousand dollars, with ten years in the penitentiary. But is Madeline Pollard entitled to lifteen thousand dollars or eyen fifteen cents? She has shown herself a brilliant woman, though a wantor. She was, as the evidence shows, a woman of the world, and a bright one, before Breckenridge eyer met her. She was no inexperienced school girl. She was over ten years old and no girl passes that when a gentleman approaches ber the full significance of the act. She is particeps criminis with Breckenridge. They have both committed a fearful crime. They were both intelligent, free | Honors as yet, are even. moral agents and went into it, both with intelligent eyes wide open. She it was who dragged the vile bundle of a lascivious life from the line Pollard ought to be forever covered in obloquy. What a mass of and it is against nature. A man may err bu' ail his home, his wife and her babies be as pure as the snowdrifts upon the summit of the mountain peaks, but if the woman errs the home nest is befouled. The blood of her children contaminated at the very fountain head. This is the difference and upon it are based the social laws which hold the can the guiltier of the two.

Breckentidge's abomnible hypocrisy coupled with his sin in this way goes to make a sum of villing which is unpardonable from any standpoint you may look at it. We have no pity for him, no sympathy, no toleration. He is altogether vile, but he is held ac countable while his base partner in crime is rewarded. Out upon that jury, Madaline is encouraged to go on in her course without reference as to whom her future victims may be. This is a premium upon vice from a female point of view. They should have been punished equally and pittilessly. The circumstances of this fear ful crime and its exposure should be used to deter its future commission not to encourage the woman while crushtwo girls, all of whom are alive and well.

"I thought," says the surprised father, "that we were coming to a time of astonishing pluralities when they began to consisting pluralities when they began to constitute the woman while you behead the man and the vice will ago. But, oh, my I didn't look for any they like this lead they ago to be a superior of the best of the undersigned, S. R. Keep the women and increase rather than be lessened.

A disgraceful punishment should be meeted out to both, or eyen a capital one. If such were the case the passions which Breckenridge declared were uncontrolable under certain circomstances, would become tame enough

This evening Mr. Jesse McCauslin retires from the postoffice here and is succeeded by Mr. W. D. Roberts. Since we have known the Province of the control of Since we have known the Provo post office and its management we have no cause of complaint, Mr. McC. has been a taithful, painstaking, honest official. Bright Spring Days.

The spring should be pre-eminently a season of contentment, happiness and bundle of a lascivious life from the hidden dens where it was placed, into the broad open light of day, not him. For this act the name of Madeline Pollard ought to be forever as often a period of discomfort and disturbance in the physical system. Important organs of the body become covered in obloquy. What a mass of evil has thus been done by her act will possibly never be known. No one knows how many girls of tender years have read and been contaminated by the recital of the lastiylous details. Pollard knows all this yet was careless of it, yet a jury rewards her.

The verdict cannot be in any sense made to do service as a vindication of woman hood. God forbid it, It is said, in justification, that there should be no distinction between the man and the woman in such matters. That's a beautiful theory but it is unreasonable and it is against nature. A man may
